WILL ESTABLISH BRAID FACTORY IN BRADBURY MILLS AT OLD LYME
Negotiations have been concluded by which the Bradbury Mills at Old Lyme have been purchased by the newly formed Art Laces and Braid Co. Inc., capitalized at $50,000, which will at once establish on this site at Old Lyme a factory for the manufacture of cords, lacings, non-elastic lacings, braids, fish lines and a box shop.
The incorporators of the new company are Ralph W. Patrick of this city, Frank L. Powell of North Stonington and Frank H. Patrick of this city. It is expected that the factory can begin operations in about two or three months and will employ about 40 hands at the start.
The Bradbury Mills have long been used for manufacturing woolen goods and there is a quantity of woolen machinery that must be taken out in order to make room for installing the new machinery for the braid factory. The sale and removal of the woolen machinery will be accomplished as speedily as possible.
The mill property was sold to the new owners by John H. and James Bradbury.

of Captain Miles Standish, the latter being painted in 1828 by a Norwich artist, Alexander Simmons.
Included in the Geer collection are a pair of pillow cases 250 years old, a quantity of old fashioned dishes and a bed quilt, the latter worthy of special mention. The border of the quilt is of calico which cost $1 per yard, while the center is elaborately embroidered with a design of a ship.
In one of the glass cases some very exquisite lace pieces are to be observed. One visitor remarked that they were as choice as any lace he had seen in the Metropolitan Museum in New York; and that they should be displayed in the collection of the finest laces in the world.
On the upper floor of the museum are two umbrellas, the dimensions being 16 feet in circumference, and 5 feet in diameter. One, a green silk with ivory handle, was in fine condition, a testimony of the quality of the material.
A large set piece of artificial flowers mounted in a gilt frame, has attracted no little attention. This is loaned by Mrs. Otto E. Wulf. When entering the museum, almost the first thing one sets their eyes on, is a model of Lord Mayors' coach bearing the inscription: "Presented to children of J. W. Wither, Kinsey, by Robert Bishop of Liverpool, England, in 1822. Loaned by Dr. W. E. Tingley." This coach which especially attracts children, has been spoken of as the one which was in the parade at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of Norwich. Significant among the books is a complete Concordance to the Holy Scriptures, owned and used by Jedediah Huntington, who was born in Norwich in 1743, and was married to Faith Trumbull, eldest daughter of Governor Trumbull, in 1766. Also a Bible loaned by Sampson Odom, (Indian) by George III, was brought to this country from England in 1766, by Odom.
Differing greatly from the present styles, was a green silk dress with bodice and lace trimmings. This elaborate gown was made by Mrs. J. M. Huntington to wear to the wedding of the daughter of J. M. Huntington. In the Cornelia Eliza Huntington collection were several bonnets of all descriptions, loaned by Mrs. Owen S. Smith. There also was one bonnet 60 years old, loaned by Mrs. Anna A. Browning.
Of the many smaller articles, conspicuous are two parlor oil lamps about six inches high given by Mrs. H. H. Osgood; and a key 19 inches long used by Benedict Arnold, when in Dr. Lathrop's drug store. A cradle loaned by Mrs. Channing M. Huntington, serving tray by Mrs. Owen S. Smith, and old fashioned hat boxes by the Misses Leavens, are included in the exhibit on the first floor.
The most tiny contribution to the museum is a small peach stone with center removed, enclosing 25 silver spoons which would almost require a magnifying glass to make them visible.
Many tourists in motoring through Norwich Town have availed themselves of the privileges of the museum on these visiting days, several having felt a desire to return for another inspection of this valuable and rare accumulation of relics.

It is the desire of the chapter to have each visitor record his or her address. Besides those from New England and the Middle Atlantic, registrations include (Clergy, Ill. Hillman, Minn. Kansas City, Mo. San Francisco, Cal. Milwaukee, Wis. Greenville, Mich. Hammon, O. Memphis, Tenn. Grinnell, Iowa. Versailles, France. Buenos Aires, Argentina and Poughkeepsie, N. Y.).
Mrs. A. N. H. Vaupe is the present regent of the chapter. The committee in charge for 1922 comprises: Mrs. Amos A. Browning, Mrs. J. P. Hathrop, Mrs. Hugh H. Osgood, Mrs. Channing M. Huntington, Mrs. William T. Browne, Mrs. William S. Jaffee, Mrs. Sarah L. Tyler, Miss Eliza Avery and Miss Mary E. Watters.
If anybody is dying to have you reform him you can bet that the job isn't worth while.

POETRY
WEEK END.
Nest walks and lawn and wire-bound
Ere my friend's determined quest
For beauty.
His eyes are trimmed and taught to do
His duty.
As teachers train concerts of childish heads.
About the house in studied carelessness
Clean-painted, as a glass through climbing vine.
And gleams around the porch rail
In disciplined, obedient dunes.
My own hillside is wild and overgrown;
A tangled path winds to the shack
above.
And beauty is not bound upon a throne.
But in the vanguard that free hearts
love.
This perfect order subtly lets me know
I must be circumstanced a day or so —Devere Allen, in The World Tomorrow.

NEW BOOK PUBLISHED
BY MISS MARGARET FULLER
One World at a Time is the title of a new book by Miss Margaret Fuller of this city which has been issued this week by The Century Company. As a writer of delightful prose and poetry Miss Fuller has previously made excellent use of her well recognized ability in this field and the fascinating story in the novel is told in that smooth and charming manner that characterizes her work.
It is a story of South Carolina life in which Miss Fuller goes back to some of her own experiences for the setting and for some of the characters. Back to the days when as a little girl she visited an uncle in South Carolina and came to know many such Americans of French descent as those who so vividly describes in her novel.
It is a book that grips the attention from the very beginning. It is a picture of plantation life with its many sides some years following the Civil war dealing with the delicate touch of race and customs in that region and portraying in a wholly entrancing manner some most interesting characters. It is a book on different lines than her volume, A New England Childhood, which dealt so delightfully with the life of Edmund Clarence Stedman, but it is one in which there is finely displayed her sense of values and her appreciation of beauty. Glimpses of her quick humor are continually cropping out and there is always a sense of abounding vitality imparted.
It is not a random collection of memories for the love story that runs through the book is beautifully told along with the refreshingly original folk and the unexpected incidents, arresting in their interest and about great old hospitable homes, around and over the southland with its sea islands of cotton fame, with sea washed bays and channels, the wayward palm trees and flowers and plantation life mingled everywhere with sea air and blossom perfume.
Miss Fuller's style makes easy reading and she tells a story that not only entertains but lingers in the mind of the reader since it is something out of the every day of life.
The volume of 22 chapters and 325 pages is published by The Century Company and dedicated to Eugene, lover of flowers.
